

I subject that the marriage date should be moved forward at least 20 years, 1936 is trailing on the side of ultra cautiousness - why does Australian marriages go pass 1958, yet NZ stays at a coy 1936? The 'the scared zone' who quote privacy as the main vulnerability do not realise that once dead their lives are lost to oblivion and we the researcher and genealogists can resurrect them in family trees etc. their remaining descendants are usually happy to see who they were and what they were.

Even the miserly death cut off can surely add another 10 years..

I do like your system please don't change that it's easy to use - just add more years please.

Yours Sincerely
